Expanded Course Description

Health economics is a key area of research in academia, government and industry and has become a central theme in current public policy debates in Canada. By examining the role of economic analysis in rationalizing the resources allocated to the health care sector, this course aims to:

1. Familiarize students with the application of the tools of economic analysis to the field of health and health care.
2. Allow students to gain greater awareness of the economic underpinnings of health care delivery in Canada and their implications to contemporary health policy issues.

The course analyzes the economic determinants of supply and demand in the health care sector. Special focus will be placed on the role of health insurance, public financing, funding arrangements and reimbursement methods in the provision and utilization of health services. Economic analysis of physicians, hospitals and pharmaceutical companies and implications to current health policy debates will also be discussed.

Course Text / Readings

Lecture notes will be provided on the course website.

(Optional) Hurley, Jeremiah E. 2010. Health Economics. 1st edition. McGraw-Hill Ryerson.

Note: Additional readings may be assigned or recommended during the course.

Evaluation

The final grade for the course will be based on the following items weighted as indicated:

- | | |
|---------------------------|---|
| Midterm Test 1: | 25% (Tuesday, February 11 th In Class) |
| Midterm Test 2: | 25% (Tuesday, March 17 th In Class) |
| Final Examination: | 50% (To be scheduled by the Registrar's Office) |

Note: Final course grades may be adjusted to conform to Program or Faculty grades distribution profiles.

Your grade for this course will be based on two tests each worth 25% and a 2.5 hour final examination worth 50% of the final grade. Both the tests and the final exam will be closed book with multiple choice and short-answer written questions. Sample questions and answers are provided on the course website for practice. Each test will be comprised of material as indicated on the lecture schedule, and they are not cumulative (that is Test 2 will not cover Test 1 material). The final exam will cover material from the entire course but will be weighted heavier on material covered after the second test.

There are no make-up tests for any reason. Should you miss a test without a valid reason, you will receive a grade of zero. If you provide the instructor with proper documentation of a valid reason (e.g. York Attending Physician Statement), the weight of the missing test will be transferred to the final exam. Students that miss the final exam are required to notify the instructor and the main Economics office within 48 hours and prepare valid documentation to attest to the reason the exam was missed before a deferred exam will be granted.
