

SU 2022

AP/WRIT 1703 6.0 (A)	Writing Process: Invention, Originality, Ethics
Course Director:	Name: Dr. Stephanie Bell Office: ONLINE Ext. e-mail: T1 - Stevie Bell, stepbell@yorku.ca T2 - Dion Tubrett, dtubrett@yorku.ca T3 - Dion Tubrett, dtubrett@yorku.ca other information: Appointments via ZOOM through email
Time:	ONLINE Asynchronous
Delivery Format:	ONLINE – (asynchronous delivery)
Description:	Writing is commonly conceptualized as a process of “writing up,” the act of documenting fully formed ideas, arguments, and conclusions. However, scholarship in writing studies shows that writing is a recursive process of knowledge production. Writers inevitably find themselves “writing through” ideas and issues and landing somewhere unexpected. Writing is also a process of knowledge production in a larger sense. As writers engage with what others have said before them, they contribute to social constructions of knowledge. Underestimating the complexity and power of the writing process can cause writers to become frustrated and even defeated by the exercise. In this course, students develop a critical understanding of writing processes and the roles writing process plays in the production of knowledge. Are ideas originated, developed, found, borrowed? What principles, beliefs, and motivations govern the ways ideas come into being, circulate, and develop? Students develop social science research, critical thinking, and writing skills through course subject matter and assignments. In particular, this course helps students grapple with what it means to “write in your own words,” as university-level assignments invite them to move beyond imitation and repetition to contribution and “originality.” Course Evaluation Assignment: Graded Discussion Forum Posts (6 total) Weight: 30% Deadline: Thursdays as per the schedule Late submission deadline: August 5th Assignment: Paper 1 Weight: 30% Deadline: June 17 Assignment: Paper 2 Weight: 40% Deadline: August 5th

Historical Requirement:	N/A
Requirement:	Course credit exclusions: AP/WRIT 1700 9.00, AP/WRIT 1701 9.00, AP/WRIT 1702 9.00. Note: This is an approved LA&PS General Education course: Social Science.
Reading List: (Subject to change – please check with Instructor/York Bookstore before purchasing)	All course readings are open-access or available through the York University library system to keep your costs low. See the course schedule for more information.
Open To:	Open