Course Description and Objectives

The course begins with a brief overview of the nature of the employment relations in Canada. This includes an examination of the fundamental economic determinants of wages and working conditions as well as the common law of employment. Following the overview of nonunion employment, the course examines reasons why some employees want to join unions and the way that unions are certified under the Ontario Labour Relations Act. The impacts of collective bargaining are also studied, including the causes and consequences of strikes and lockouts. Bargaining under various public sector statutes is examined as well. Finally, alternatives to the traditional adversarial bargaining method are studied, including third party dispute resolution.

This course aims to teach students:

- What motivates employees to join a union;
- The process by which unions become certified and what employer practices are prohibited during the process;
- The process of collective bargaining and alternatives to the traditional adversarial approach through interest-based bargaining;
- Determinants of the incidence and duration of strikes and the consequences of strikes for the organization and the economy;
- The way in which arbitration is used to resolve grievances in cases of employee discipline or discharge;
- How bargaining in the public sector differs from that in the private sector and the range of alternatives to the strike used to resolve disputes in the public sector.

Course Website: I will use the eClass to teach this course and facilitate communication among students and myself. Note that eClass will be the only venue to download lecture slides, find up-to-date notices about the course, and retrieve your course grades. Please check the site, as well as your yorku email regularly. You can log on to the course through <https://eclass.yorku.ca/>

Email Policy and Communication

My preferred method of contact is by e-mail at jingwan@yorku.ca. Please email me directly to this address not through eClass. When you email me, please use your full real name and write down the course number and section in the subject line. I will answer your email within 24 hours during weekdays. On weekend and holidays, please expect 36 to 48 hours. I will also post all messages on the course website under Announcement regarding such things as exam locations, exam format, and discussion queries etc. The announcement will also go to your email address that you register with course website. Please make sure you register an email that you check often.

Marking Allocations

Participation	30%
Midterm	30%
Final Exam	40%
	100%

Weekly Participation:

Regular and active participation is an essential, unmistakably important aspect of this online course. It is critical that you read all the lecture and assignment materials as well as all the public discussion materials. Your full participation ON A WEEKLY BASIS is not only a requirement, but also an essential aspect of the online course process.

Each week you are to post ONE answer to the weekly discussion question and at least TWO comments to your classmates' answers. Postings should show insight into the topic. Note: Once the week has passed (i.e., Saturday midnight) you have lost the opportunity to participate and postings do not count. At the end of the term, you will be assigned a grade out of 30 for participation.

The quality of your response is important. Responses should be well written and clearly address the issues being discussed. Please limit your postings to 250 words.

I understand emergency and sickness may happen, so I will only use 9 out of the 11 discussion assignments to calculate your participation mark. I will NOT grade late posts no matter what.

Exams:

There will be TWO closed-book exams: a midterm and a final. Both exams will be held online.

Midterm – Date to be announced.

The mid-term exam will cover course content from Week 1 to Week 6 and will be closed book. The format will be multiple choice questions. There will be no other alternative dates to write the mid-term so please be diligent about writing the mid-term on the assigned date.

Students missing the midterm due to legitimate reasons who have proper documentation (i.e., a medical note) will be allowed to transfer the weight of midterm to the final exam.

Final — The final exam is scheduled to be written during university final exam period. The date is to be announced.

The final exam will be non-cumulative and cover course content from Week 9 to Week 14. It is also a closed book exam. The format for the final exam will be multiple choice questions and short answer questions. In accordance with the University Policy, medical documentation will be required when an examination is missed. Students who miss the final exam may petition to write a deferred exam.

SHRM policy on deferred exams: The deferred Exam (i.e. deferred final exam) will be closed book, cumulative and will include all subjects/topics of the textbook. Deferred exams are not necessarily in the same format as the exam written by your section of the course. The format for deferred exams is not released in advance. Access to a course website will not be given. Please save your lecture notes/presentation slides.

Special accommodation: For students with disabilities requiring special accommodation for writing of examinations, please make the necessary arrangements well in advance of the examination dates so that the paperwork can be signed.

Note about the Course Outline:

The course outline serves as a guide to give you a general idea of what to expect in the sessions. Occasionally, other material may be introduced that is not on the outline. These items will help to further illustrate the topics under study and will be of benefit to you. The point is that the outline is not carved in stone. Variations will be evident during the term dependent on your needs as well as the professor's discretion.

Notes about Online Courses

Successful online students are active learners, who are willing to take responsibility for their own learning and able to communicate effectively in both a synchronous and asynchronous environment using a variety of technologies (Burd and Buchanan, 2004, p 407)

It is vital that you visit the site regularly and frequently so that you do not miss the opportunity to participate and post comments and questions from your study of the materials and your own experiences. In order to get the most out of this course, you will need to dedicate in the region of 8-12 hours per week to first read the textbook, PowerPoint slides and view any associated videos and web-links and then follow up with further directed reading of the related text chapter, test your memory and understanding by taking the self-tests associated with each module and also completing any discussions or additional assignment.

While an online course can be flexible to meet your needs of when and where you can take part on-line rather than having set classroom times, it still means that the course can be quite demanding. You may want to visit the websites below and try out their on-line self assessments to check out your expectations and needs from an on-line course.

The content of the course is divided into 11 weeks which are to be studied in ascending order (i.e., all work relating to Week 1 must be completed before attempting Week 2 and so on).

How you manage your time is your responsibility but remember to give yourself enough time during the week to read materials both online and the text book/other readings. You will also need to plan time to take part in discussions and online weekly tasks.

As well as working independently, you are encouraged to make contact with your fellow online students through participation in online conferences, responding to your classmates' postings and questions.

Academic Honesty (Senate Policy):

Atkinson as a Faculty considers breaches of the Senate Policy on Academic Honesty to be serious matters. To quote the Senate Policy on Academic Honesty:

The Policy on Academic Honesty is a reaffirmation and clarification for members of the University of the general obligation to maintain the highest standards of academic honesty. It outlines the general responsibility of faculty to foster acceptable standards of academic conduct and of the student to be mindful of and abide by such standards.

Faculty members are encouraged to pursue suspected cases of academic honesty with formal charges. Students should, however, review the York Academic Honesty policy for themselves at: <http://www.yorku.ca/secretariat/legislation/senate/acadhone.htm>

Students might also wish to review the interactive on-line Tutorial for students on academic integrity, at: <http://www.yorku.ca/academicintegrity/tutorial.htm>
