Course Description	The purpose of this course is to introduce you to a set of topics and policy issues pertaining to the macro-economy, and to provide you with the theoretical tools and foundations to understand them. The course will build on the topics covered in ECON 2400, to examine inter-temporal consumption, savings, and investment decisions, fiscal policy, theories of business cycle fluctuations in market clearing and sticky-price frameworks, money, inflation and monetary policy, as well as open-economy macroeconomics. Some emphasis will be placed on the Canadian economy.
Textbook	The required textbook is Macroeconomics (6 th Canadian Edition), by Stephen D. Williamson, Pearson Canada, 2021.
Evaluation	Midterm Exam (worth 40%): Monday, February 26, 2024 , class time  Final Exam (worth 60%): April exam period  Both midterm and final exams will be held in-person .  The midterm exam will be held during class time. There will be no make-up exam for the midterm. For students that provide appropriate and timely documentation for missing the midterm, the weight will be transferred to the final exam.  The date/time of the final exam will be set at a later date and announced well in advance. The final exam will include all the material covered in the course. A student that misses the final exam and requests deferred standing, must consult the Guidelines for Deferred Standing , available at: http://econ.laps.yorku.ca/students/academic-policies-procedure/deferred-standing/ Students who may require further extensions or accommodation will have to submit a formal petition to the Faculty.
