TA Hours: TBA

Prerequisite/Co-requisite:

AP/ECON 1000 3.00 and AP/ECON 1010 3.00 or equivalents.

Course Description:

In this course we will study countries' national accounts, balance of payments, exchange rate regimes and their determination. We will build on this knowledge to study foreign exchange and money markets, monetary and stabilization policies, currency and financial crises with specific examples including the Euro crisis. We will also study the new topic of cryptocurrencies with an emphasis on how they are changing global economic models. The theoretical tools developed in this course will equip students with the methods to analyze and evaluate alternative international macroeconomic policies and the confidence to apply these tools to real-world scenarios.

Required Course Materials:

Textbook: International Economics: Theory & Policy, 11th Edition (digital), by Paul Krugman, Maurice Obstfeld and Marc Melitz.

Additional readings may be assigned or recommended during the course.

Grading Policy:

- There is no final exam in this course. Test 2 will be cumulative.
- If a student misses a test, there will be no make-up test. The weight of a missed Test 1 will be transferred to Test 2 only for medical reasons. The student must provide the instructor with an attending physician's statement within one week of the missed exam.
- If a student misses Test 2 or both tests for medical reasons, the student must provide the instructor with an attending physician's statement within one week of the missed obligation(s) and will complete an original term paper on a topic covered by the course that is assigned by the instructor. The length and requirements of the term paper will be determined by the instructor according to how much of the course work has not been completed.

Important Course Information:

Final course grades given by the instructor will use the standard York grading scale and may be adjusted to conform to Program or Faculty grades distribution profiles. In addition, all students are expected to familiarize themselves with the following information, available on the Senate Committee on Academic Standards, Curriculum & Pedagogy webpage:
