| Time: | Thursday 11:30-2:20pm |
| Delivery Format: | SEMINAR – in-person |
| Description: | The purpose of the course is to introduce students to the writing of poetry and fiction through the practices that comprise the writing lives of published authors. It is designed to familiarize students with literary traditions and the possibilities of these forms, to help them explore creative reading/writing/editing processes, and to discover their talents. As the main focus of these studios is on students developing their own literary writing, and not commercial writing, instruction is not formulaic but requires that students, through a community of practice and engagement with the writing life, work actively and independently to make connections between terminology, readings, lectures, and their own creative processes. Students are expected to improve and polish their work and to develop an appreciation for, and understanding of, different approaches to literary writing. The main premise of this course is that words are transformative and it is hoped that students will approach this experience with openness, humility, ability to work through the frustration of a challenge and willingness to take risks so that they may transform themselves into emerging artists of the written word. Each week there will be a three-hour workshop that involves lectures, discussions of readings, exercises, assignments and critiques. Work needs to be completed by the dates specified. Readings are to be done before writing assignments so that techniques, devices and approaches can be discovered and inform creative work. Exercises need to be collected in a Writer's Notebook. Work to be critiqued must be submitted both in hard copy and uploaded in eClass for dissemination to the class. Participation in reading discussions and critiques are crucial for success in the course. |
